Faculty and Administration

Chief Administrators at Simmons

President Bancroft Beatley is the hub of the Simmons' wheel. He has been coordinator of administration, faculty, and student body for eighteen years. A former Professor of Education in the Graduate School of Education at Harvard, President Beatley, with his superior academic background, has brought many advances to Simmons during his administration; among other things the Placement Office was centralized and the standards of admission were raised and developed.

President Beatley, a man of many interests, enjoys whatever he does. When he finds time to relax, he often tinkers with his miniature model railroad or plays an energetic game of ping-pong. There is hardly a Simmons student who hasn't heard about the mighty game President Beatley played at the annual Faculty-Student Baseball Game. Nor is there a girl in the college who hasn't been warmly greeted by President Beatley at Simmons proms.

President Beatley is known for his keen sense of humor and his willingness to give advice and help in student projects. With sincere understanding and tact, President Beatley is constantly striving to build a better Simmons.

Dean Eleanor Clifton's warm smile makes you feel immediately at home and at ease. Although she has been at Simmons only a few years, she has taken over her duties and responsibilities with ability, the determination to do a good job, and the attitude that nothing gets done unless you do it. Besides her other jobs, Dean Clifton helps to determine college policy, and guides student activities, taking a personal interest in her students.

With sincere interest in each girl socially, emotionally, spiritually, and intellectually, Dean Clifton deals with student welfare and complaints . . . hundreds of individual problems. Her new duty this year is the management of freshman guidance, formerly a function of the admissions office.

A Goucher College graduate, Dean Clifton likes the friendly atmosphere at Simmons. She enjoys relaxing at the Boston Symphony, is fond of the theatre, and hopes to find time for gardening in the spring. A sympathetic and understanding friend and counselor, Dean Clifton is never too busy to give help and advice.

President Beatley's signature carries weight.

Dean Clifton's careful checking ensures smooth sailing.

They Have a

When we were freshmen, the faculty and administration awed us with their overwhelming knowledge. When we were sophomores, they seemed more human. By junior year, we all had our favorites. And by senior year, we all agreed that each and every one of the friendly, enthusiastic, and understanding men and women on our faculty would never be forgotten. It is with pride that we present the following:

Mrs. Margaret K. Gonyea, Registrar, attends to all matters pertaining to registration. A very capable and efficient woman, Mrs. Gonyea, in her office on the second floor, keeps accurate accounts of our course credits and year hours.

Miss Doris M. Sutherland, Director of Admission, leads a very busy and personally satisfying life. Miss Sutherland interviews girls who hope to be admitted to Simmons. Girls in the college as well as prospective Simmons students are always welcome to come in and see Miss Sutherland if they desire personal interviews and guidance.

Mr. Richard K. Bachelder, Treasurer and Comptroller, is the man who collects our tuition. A cooperative and business-like man, Mr. Bachelder takes care of college money matters including the supervision of term bills, the auditing of club books, and the inspection of club accounts and the expenses of various club publications.

Dr. Wylie Sypher, Professor of English, Chairman of the Division of Language, Literature, and the Arts, and Dean of the Graduate Division, has established himself as an institution at Simmons. Advisor to the Class of '52, Dr. Sypher is spoken of with affection by all Simmons students. Whether he is making a speech at an Academy banquet or delivering a lecture on Shakespeare, Dr. Sypher is always provocative and stimulating.

Dr. Joseph G. Needham, Assistant Professor of Psychology and Simmons' Vice-President, is particularly known for his executive and teaching ability. His friendly, outgoing personality (witnessed in full force at the Holly Ball) is always noticeable in his lectures. As vice-president of the college, Dr. Needham is constantly on the go getting things done, and getting them done in the right way.

A busy day ahead for Miss Webb.

With a background of magazine and industrial publishing behind her, Mrs. Yvonne Broadcorens, Director of Publicity, keeps Simmons in the lime-light by releasing items of interest to the daily papers. Energetic and fun-loving Mrs. Broadcorens heads the committee which puts out the Simmons Outlook, works with the publicity chairmen of the many student clubs, and serves on the Public Relations Council of the college.

Miss Emily G. Webb, Director of the Office of Resources, is constantly at work trying to expand our building facilities and create endowments for faculty salaries. Miss Webb hopes that with the help of philanthropic individuals, Simmons will some day have adequate dining facilities for the entire college, a Social and Health Unit, a Science Building, and a fully equipped Library Building.

Dr. Marjorie Readdy has succeeded in giving Simmons gals medical treatment at the college, on campus, and in the infirmary. On call twenty-four hours a day, Dr. Readdy has seen her dreams come true—a new Health Office, improved working facilities, expanded X-Ray equipment, and an excellent immunization program.

With Miss Hanson at work, there's a job in your future.

"Dekie's" thoughts are forever on a million dollar contribution to the Alumnae Fund.

Chair for Facts

Miss Hanson, Director of Placement, does her best to place graduates according to their occupational, geographical, and personal preferences. By keeping in close touch with many business firms, Miss Hanson is able to place a large number of graduates.

Few people realize the amount of time, work, and enthusiasm Miss Helen Deacon contributes to the Alumnae Association. As executive secretary of the Association, Miss Deacon serves as a liaison between the Alumnae Association and the college. Miss Deacon is largely responsible for organizing class reunions, coordinating joint activities, and publicizing the Alumnae Fund.

Miss Ruth Danielson, Director of Students on Brookline Avenue Campus, is a true and personal friend to all her girls. She works with House Chairmen to arrange for Senior Faculty Dinner, Academy Banquet, Sophomore Luncheon, May Breakfast, Olde English Dinner, and many other Simmons affairs. Besides these duties, Miss Danielson takes a personal interest in each girl's individual needs and requests.

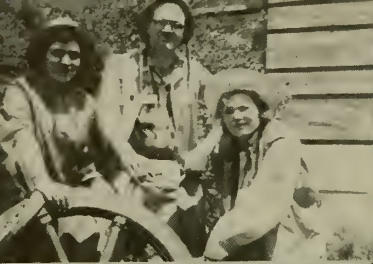

Mrs. Broadcorens checks the day's news releases.

Our faculty . . . lively classroom discussions . . . a friendly "hi" in the corridor . . . conferences in smoke-filled offices . . . basketball games in the gym . . . Spring Spree's memorable baseball game . . . coffee, cigarettes, and pragmatism at Stowaway . . . advice on choosing courses . . . those deadly ping-pong battles . . . white tie and tails for formal dinners and proms.

Social chatter at teas . . . an extension granted on a term paper just when everything seemed utterly hopeless . . . notices, legible and otherwise, put up on the official blackboard . . . a chance to vote on the question of what day an exam should be given . . . class in the backyard on warm, summer days . . . this is our faculty.

Schools

When Business

Paul L. Salsgiver,
Director of School of Business

What was life to a Business gal like me, Carolina Corona, for three years? Until my senior year I couldn't quite tell . . . there were so many things. Was it actually anything more than "can, go or good, are, our, hour, will or well" . . . an elastic band in my notebook . . . a red correcting pencil . . . a ratchet release . . . a variable line spacer . . . the letters "asdfg?"

Was it anything more than the Introduction to Business notebook that made me scramble for material from September to June . . . or the endless hours of reading . . . Tide . . . Printers' Ink . . . Modern Packaging . . . Wall Street Journal . . . Advertising Agency?

Perhaps it was the Sherlock Holmes attitude I developed in Marketing, following a product from its embryonic stage to the consumer . . . the Necco Company . . . or in Business Policies and Problems, investigating the background of business firms, their operating techniques, and their structure . . . General Radio . . . WBZ.

Was it typing and shorthand two hours every day . . . 40 words a minute, then fifty, then one hundred?

oh, what's the use?*

Becomes a Pleasure

Was life in the Business School just a dull college grind learning about stocks, bonds, and assets . . . contracts and negotiable papers . . . accounting . . . liquidation and mergers . . . manufacturing expenses?

Maybe, I thought, the Business School was made up of people, not subjects and projects. Our lord and master, Mr. Salsgiver . . . Miss Sweeney . . . mimeographs . . . fluid duplicator . . . adding machines . . . Ediphones. Isabella, Rita Ann, and Tilly . . . the Andrew Sisters, who sang so beautifully at the Business Party in November . . . the supper with the faculty.

It wasn't until my senior year that I realized where life in the Business School was actually leading me. Everything in the Business School had given me a broad general education and the specific knowledge and skills required in the business world . . . accounting . . . advertising . . . personnel . . . inter-American relations . . . medical and scientific secretarial training.

I have been kept very busy these four years. But not too busy to keep up my social life. It was at a Harvard Law Dance that I met Lucius C. Smith, Harvard Business major. It was love at first sight

. . . so much in common . . . statistics . . . accounting . . . Kleppner.

We have been thinking about marriage. We have considered the problem from all angles. We know how to budget and save, how to buy property and insurance, and how to finance a home. I certainly know how to buy butter and eggs from my courses in Marketing and Ec. So Lucius C. Smith and I will be married in August and plan to open our own advertising agency . . . Corona and Smith.

My, what a pretty net worth.

"I hear singing and there's no one there." (Business Machines)

Home Economics -- It's More

Prick your finger? Burn your biscuits? Not me. I'm called Sally the Seamstress . . . Katie the Cook . . . Dora the Dietician. But whatever you choose to call me, I'm just another proud gal in Home Ec.

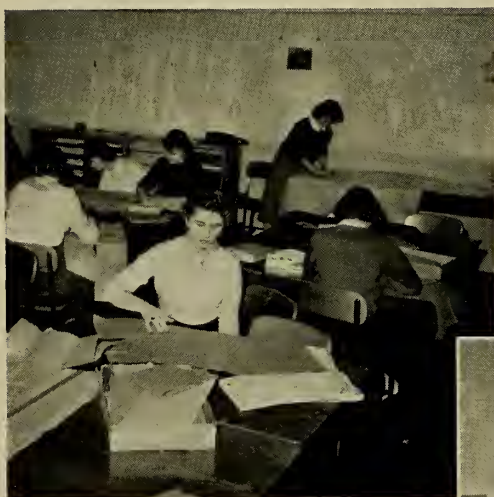

Having decided to be a "Home Eccer", Miss Robb helped be to pick my courses. I was ready to begin . . . textiles . . . design . . . dietetics . . . psych. I had vague suspicions about bio. and chem., but soon those vague suspicions developed into downright animosity. It was after the first chem. hour exam that I began thinking about changing schools; but I accepted the challenge, attacked my courses with renewed vigor, and came out limping, ready for my second year.

I expected nothing short of manual labor, but I guess I had become tempered to tribulation. Physiology and organic chem . . . comparatively painless. Foods and nutrition . . . Miss Hord . . . hot rolls . . . salads . . . cereal. Clothing . . . exciting. In sophomore year fury possessed me when anyone referred to my course as "cookin' and sewin'" and the easy way to earn by MRS. degree . . . me with twenty-six hours a week.

Junior year was wonderful . . . Dr. Harley . . . education . . . child development . . . bacteriology . . . economics. But all my labors began to look worthwhile when it came time to do field work at Lincoln House . . . kids . . . kids . . . and more of the same.

One of the high spots of junior year was living in Home Management House on Pilgrim Road for eight weeks with all the other Home Ec juniors. Pilgrim House . . . that's the place with the radar ranges that bake an apple pie in two minutes and burn an egg in thirty seconds.

When I taught in a nearby public school during my five and a half weeks of field work, I began to feel a new enthusiasm for my chosen career. All the girls in Education (my major) and Institutional Management received remarkable training . . . we even had compliments to take back to our pleased-as-punch teachers.

The I. M. gals had worked at the Women's Education and Industrial Union in the bakery and catering stations for their field assignment. Mrs. Dodge insisted upon an observant mind . . . I can still hear the groans of the girls with short memories. . . . Remember Home Management with the continental and unpredictable Mrs. Abbott . . . the quizzes with the invariable questions on current events?

Now it's all over . . . I'm a graduate. I wish I could boast a bit about Home Ec . . . the fun in labs . . . the feeling of belonging to a group . . . our practical and cultural accomplishments. But I guess I'll just have to muzzle my pride.

Culture, Catalogues,

*Kenneth R. Shaffer,
Director of School of Library Science*

My name is Debby—D as in Dui, and people often tell me I'm in a class by myself. It's hard to believe that I've finally reached the end, or perhaps only the beginning, of my struggles. I can still remember freshman year. I first embraced Library Science at College Opp when I suddenly woke up to hear Mr. Shaffer mention something about salaries. But realizing that a college freshman should look for higher ideals, I thought it fit to conjure up some less tangible and more aesthetic motivations. I went to see Mr. Shaffer. "There are at least six advantages to the library field . . ." These I promptly memorized and now recite as glibly as he.

Then came three carefree years of pure, unadulterated culture . . . economics . . . sociology . . . psychology . . . and the trying task of indoctrinating skeptic friends in the virtues of Library Science . . . "There are six definite advantages . . ." I admit I had moments of doubt in those undergraduate years when I looked into a certain corner of Library A, but I preserved my ideals and went on.

The fun didn't really begin until I was a senior . . . one big student-faculty family. P slips and red pencils—professionals at last! Qui vive? Stencils became the password . . . A gold medal to Mrs. Prout for action above and beyond the call of duty. Man of the hour . . . H. W. Wilson.

I learned the tricks of the trade. When asked for a copy of Plato's Republic, I no longer asked, "Who wrote it?" I became groomed for my ever-demanding public . . . approachable . . . imaginative . . . poised. I learned to resist temptation . . . never, oh, never would I tell a patron to go to the Dickens (section).

Cataloging . . . What would be the author entry for a thrice married woman who wrote ten books under her maiden name, fifteen under the name of her second husband, and was planning to get married again?

Classification . . . now we go beyond the title page. Does Grounds for living go with books on divorce courts or landscape gardening? Reference . . . where, oh, where is Christ of the Andes? . . . did the King of Siam actually send President Lincoln that gift of elephants?

Book selection . . . will it be Forever Amber or Pilgrim's Progress? Visits . . . so that's where the books are in BPL . . . a rose to Winchester for realizing that librarians are people who also like to eat . . . And remember when 1280—oops, 020—was revived?

New cure for insomnia . . . counting library pamphlets instead of sheep. Worst penalty for violating the honor code . . . writing ALA one hundred times. Remember analyzing the community? I remember, I remember so many things that make me want to wish the staff and my fellow students a life of "helth, welth, and jolity" . . . a la Dui.

A White Cap --

As a very naive freshman, I, Nellie Nightingale, had no doubts about my future. I didn't want mink; I didn't want sable. All I wanted was a crisp white uniform, a white Dutch-style cap, a tiny blue and gold pin, and a chance to be a noble woman. So in due time, I enrolled in the School of Nursing. The five year plan at Simmons, I thought, would give me the liberal arts subjects that I wanted and felt were necessary to round out my professional training.

It was in my freshman year that I first came in contact with evolution, classification, and the physical characteristics of that complicated mechanism . . .

P. Ryan and A. Schaefer see that things get done in the Nursing Lab.

Mr. Richardson raises the question of evolution.

my very own rat. And then, of course, I also had those liberal arts courses that I thought were necessary to round out my professional training . . . Rats, Lice and History . . . weekly themes, Social Studies.

Then came hour upon hour spent in the chemistry, bacteriology, anatomy, and physics laboratories where I learned about the physical and emotional characteristics of another very complicated organism . . . the human being. Never, oh never, will I ever forget the adventures I had in Foods and Nutrition whipping up such delicacies as a splendid watercress salad.

Sophomore year was broadening indeed. Mr. Stearns and Physics . . . Dr. Harley and Child Development . . . Mr. Johnson and Introduction to Sociology . . . Physiology . . . Physiology . . . and more Physiology. Eight weeks at Evans . . . daily trips to the Massachusetts General Hospital . . . principles and practices of nursing and pharmacology . . . a lesson in applied psychology . . . trying to convince a patient to swallow a nasty tasting medicine.

With junior year came constant trips to the Health Office for injections galore. I became immune to everything from the measles to the Bubonic plague. Things I shall never forget . . . my first experience on night duty . . . my first operation . . . the nervous tremors I had when I went on the wards for the first time . . . learning how to rest any time, anywhere, on any kind of bed . . . learning how to get dressed, eat, and be on duty within a ten minute period . . . my very first encounter with that greatest wonder of Nature . . . birth at the Boston Lying-In.

With all that behind me, I feel quite well-prepared for my future as a career girl in the nursing profession. But have I got my crisp white uniform? Have I got my Dutch-style cap? Have I got my tiny blue pin? No. And not only that, but I haven't even got a mink or a sable. I still have one year ahead of me . . . a year that I know will be filled with practical experience at hospitals in the Boston area as well as in the field of Public Health. And then that wonderful five year plan at Simmons will really be over. There will be no more classes at Simmons, but everything I learned and all the experience I gained through the School of Nursing will never be forgotten.

Liberal Arts

*Harrison L. Harley,
Director of School of Preprofessional Studies*

*Mr. Hunter helps a student

I, Priscilla Prepro, was confused four years ago when I entered Simmons. Fashion did not fascinate me . . . picas and points interested me only from afar . . . The mere odor of a science lab turned me green . . . I couldn't even boil water successfully . . . libraries depressed me . . . I felt faint at the sight of a hypo. What was I to do in this mecca of worldly females, all of whom seemed to know just where they were going and were getting there as fast as possible?

By the end of freshman year I realized many things . . . I liked to work with people . . . I wanted to go to graduate school—what's four years of college? . . . I craved pure, unadulterated culture. The phrase "I don't know what I came for, but I'm, oh, so glad I'm here," no longer applied to me. I knew I was going into the School of Preprofessional Studies.

But what was I going into Prepro for? It was time to be specific. Library service? Social work? Medical science and its allied fields? The answer was social work. (I had always been interested in social activities—dances and teas and parties.)

And so I began my sophomore year with an eye to the future. Economics . . . Mr. Silk . . . butter and guns . . . Malthus. American civilization . . .

With a Future

so we really are civilized. Introduction to Psychology . . . Miss Jones' blue eyes . . . Ruch . . . Pavlov's dog . . . reaction to frustration. Introduction to Sociology and Mr. Johnson . . . caste, class, and stratification . . . social norms . . . status and role.

In my senior year I began to question the world in which I lived. Psych. of adjustment . . . over-protection was a sign of rejection . . . did my mother really love me? I often felt blue, liked to step on sidewalk cracks, thought people were talking about me . . . was I slowly becoming a neurotic?

Ethnic group relations . . . should we give the country back to the Indians? . . . Did the American creed stir up a conflict in the South? . . . Would labor and management ever agree? Music . . . Was the Mule Train ever kept in Bach's corral? It was all so very confusing.

But confusing though it might have seemed, my first three years gave me a firm background for my senior courses in the Fields of Social Work . . . Miss Prentis . . . Mr. Nichols and Social Statistics . . . Mr. Deane and Principles of Psychological Measurement . . . Mr. Johnson and The Family.

Three graduate schools have accepted my application for admission in their school of social work. But I think I shall continue to be a Simmons girl and enter the Simmons School of Social Work for two more years of study and some practical application of what I have learned. Then off to welfare agency work, settlement house work, family guidance, teaching, hospital work,—who knows what the future will bring?

Mr. Hawthorne injects a bit of humor into the American Mind.

Mr. Johnson balances the values of a frame of reference.

Picas, Points,

When I, Pamela Pub, entered my first specialized class, an array of hieroglyphics greeted me . . . proofreading symbols. I learned to read differently . . . "The art of proofreading, comma . . . better cap that . . . delete the next comma . . . reverse the 'e'" and so on. The Chicago Manual of Style . . . Mr. Bliss's tour of Vermont . . . Fowler . . . Boz's English Usage . . . décolleté or décolleté?

Graphic Arts followed with new discoveries every minute. I don't get upset anymore when I'm told to "bleed" . . . cheesecake isn't something to eat . . . copyfitting . . . picas and points . . . those magical numbers "6" and "72" . . . pix and cuts . . . Publishers' Weekly . . . I live for AIGA, nothing else. As you can see, the School of Publication boasts not only its own genus of Homo sapiens, but a particular language as well.

Because most editors start as secretaries, I took Business 35 . . . typing and shorthand two hours every day. Forty words a minute . . . then fifty . . . then one hundred . . . then one hundred and thirty . . . Who am I kidding. Field trips . . . Christian Science Monitor . . . Ginn and Company . . . Stevens Nelson . . . Donovan and Sullivan.

By senior year the School of English had become the School of Publication, and had moved to the third floor. Garamond type, a Vandercook No. 3 Proof Press, and composing sticks took over. The gray and yellow Gay room . . . 352 with a ledge for drawing boards . . . Miss Williams and Mrs. Potter in their homey office . . . Ginny constantly justifying . . . and Boz in the midst of it all.

The story became one of expansion for the school, but not for me. I just plodded along with my proportion wheel, T-square, drawing board, and rubber Lopatecki . . . Varga girls with airbrush legs . . . french folds . . . mats . . . stereos . . . will I ever forget?

In the spring came the two weeks of practice work. Everything seemed to swim before my eyes when I suddenly realized I might not become an editor right away despite Business 35 . . . but my employer had patience . . . I hope he remembers me when I go back for a job . . . or maybe I hope he forgets. Either one . . . anyway you can always get married.

Publication girls have the future in mind as well as the past. And with the brains that are ours, jobs with publishers, advertisers, house organs, and the press will be waiting for us . . . that is, if we write everything down when ordering half tones and line cuts, remember what "dragon's blood" is, and don't forget that extra one-eighth inch for every "bleed" edge.

During my first two years I looked forward to my classes at 49 Commonwealth Avenue . . . to the clothes I would wear . . . to the people I'd meet. In my sophomore year Introduction to Business gave me a broad picture of the business world . . . marketing . . . finance. Oh, the glamour of it all. Forty-nine Commonwealth, here I come.

With my junior year came the preparation for my career in the fashion world . . . concentration on retail personnel . . . retail teaching . . . retail buying . . . color . . . textiles . . . line. When there were no afternoon classes, I did part-time work in Filene's or Jay's or Slattery's . . . whichever wanted me. Between classes I made an attempt to run down the four flights of stairs, have a cigarette, and run all the way up to the Green Room in time for my next class.

and again at noon when he drove us to Simmons. Executive speakers from Boston stores . . . will never forget the endless hours working on the Color and Line Manual.

My senior year will always stand out most clearly in my mind . . . many opportunities and new experiences . . . field trips through department stores in the vicinity of Boston . . . What, no free samples? The field trip to New York . . . the disp'ays in the manufacturing and designing companies . . . the wholesale houses . . . the textile exhibit at the Brooklyn Museum.

The source papers for each course which helped to prepare me for the six-week working period . . . Boston . . . Florida . . . Pennsylvania. The fashion show in January . . . we had the appearance of professional women with our hats, heels, suits, and gloves.

Bull sessions during the lunch periods and evening gatherings . . . the sales talks . . . Why didn't I take Oral English as Mr. Beckley had advised? Our last Halloween prank . . . caps, gowns, and masks to class. Those horrible lunches prepared the night before at the dormitories.

When my senior year came to a close, I knew

I was capable of putting into practice what I had learned . . . Retail Accounting . . . Merchandising . . . Retail Salesmanship . . . Sales Promotion. So much in the offing . . . I had the opportunity to take an executive training course in a large department store. In no time I would come into my own. I would put my education to work. I would be an assistant executive . . . a buyer . . . an employment interviewer.

Now the four years are over. Receiving my diploma in June means the end of schoolbook learning, but I'll never forget the wonderful years I spent in that red brick building on Commonwealth Avenue.

Martha Johnson, Pat Whittier, Liz Baker, and Dee Gerber wonder who belongs to the ace.

Beakers, Bunsen

In my freshman year, I, Sylvia Science, wondered what formaldehyde and hydrogen sulfide were. I wonder no longer. My introduction to the Science School came outside of room 216 where I met Dissecting Dora, a biology major, who liked to reminisce . . . math . . . physics . . . chemistry . . . quantitative analysis . . . biology . . . white coats . . . probers . . . pickled cats . . . all too wonderful for words.

I left Dora and wandered toward the chem lab . . . pungent odors . . . fumes . . . alchemists compounding salts . . . liberating hydrogen . . . forming precipitates. There is a reason why every one in the chem. lab is so jolly. Ever notice the label on the linseed oil bottle? "Haig and Haig."

Half hidden by smoke stood Test-Tube Tessy, a chem. major, who just loved differential and integral calculus and organic chem. Despite it all, Tessy liked to sing. "Sing a song of sulfide, a beaker full of lime. Four and twenty test tubes break all the time. When unsavory gases escape and fill the room, the students faint on smelling them, and the chemistry lab goes B-O-O-M!"

That's how it all seemed to me four years ago when everything about the School of Science charmed me. But what branch should I go into?

Gravitation Gerty, a physics major, almost convinced me to take the easy way out . . . electricity and magnetism . . . differential equations . . . calculus . . . electronics . . . thermodynamics. Logarithm Laura wanted me to be a math major so together we might find the lowest common denominator. Since that was lost in grammar school, I decided to give up looking for it.

I even thought about Orthoptics . . . I always

Connie Walker at home in the chem. lab.

Looking for a new clement.

Burners, and Boom!

did have a passion for physiological orthoptics and the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

But being an altruistic soul, I finally chose physical therapy, which I thought best suited my interest in science and my desire to help people. Formaldehyde (unknown to me as a freshman) became my daily hand lotion . . . bio . . . human anatomy . . . Children's Medical Centre . . . Mass. General . . . Peter Bent Brigham.

Although my Science School friends are in different fields, we have not drifted apart. We have so many memories . . . Ellen Richards Club meetings . . . tours of chemical companies, laboratories, hospitals . . . the attitude of informality and friendship which prevailed between student and faculty . . . Mr. Timm's smile . . . Our chemist and proofreader, Mr. Bliss . . . Our Academy star, Miss Granara . . . Mr. Solinger's sense of humor.

Even though it was tough we waded with undaunted perseverance through a hodgepodge of chemicals, a maze of complex equations, or a conglomeration of physics to the greatest reward of all—an interesting and satisfying job.

Means Self-Government

"I, as a student of Simmons College, pledge myself to do all in my power to maintain a high standard of Honor in academic and all other activities at Simmons."

Student Government at Simmons is the organization through which the students direct all the activities of the College. Honor Board is a branch of Stu-G. The honor system has always existed at Simmons because every student has made it her personal responsibility to maintain the high standards which are the Simmons tradition.

Stu-G vice-president is chairman of Dormitory Council, and it is the duty of this council to see that campus life functions smoothly.

The Social Activities chairman and her committee schedule all student meetings in the College and plan teas, dances, and athletic activities to help bring dorm and commuter students closer together.

Student Government holds open meetings regularly, and these meetings constitute an important link between the student and Stu-G, and between the student, the faculty, and the administration.

Guardians of our honor system.

Stu-G Council in action.

Student Government

The Stu-G Social Activities Committee schedules a wonderful series of headline events for Simmons gals, guys, and faculty, running the gamut from formals to baseball games.

Ye Olde English Dinner is one of the most impressive and dignified events of the year, sponsored by Stu-G for the seniors and members of Stu-G Council. Attired in medieval costumes, the students gather around the festive board as at a Christmas dinner in England long ago. The boar's head is brought forward to the court, and strolling players, jesters, and carolers entertain during the meal.

Field Day is another Simmons tradition, with the student-faculty baseball game as the highlight of the day.

Stu-G Week-end is one of the most popular events of the year. Held in December this year, it included Compets Friday night, a jazz concert by the Storyville Band Saturday afternoon, and the big Christmas formal Saturday night at the Hotel Statler.

Freshman-Sophomore Valentine Party and Freshman-Junior Jamboree gave the classes a chance to get acquainted and have a lot of fun together.

At May Breakfast the sophomores serenade their sister class, the seniors, at the break of day and invite them to a May breakfast of strawberry shortcake.

Stu-G May Party is another big spring event, when the newly elected officers for all organizations for the coming year are announced at an outdoor party. They are given corsages along with a generous round of applause.

Simmons Pops Night at Symphony Hall is a beloved tradition. Requests are played by the Pops orchestra, and everyone joins in singing the Simmons Alma Mater.

These functions, plus many teas and informal get-togethers, formulate the impressive array of good times which the Social Activities Committee of Stu-G plans for the enjoyment of everyone at Simmons.

As you turn the crisp pages of the 1952 MICRO-COSM, the thought may occur to you that, like Topsy, Mic "just grewed." Be not deceived, oh, reader. Mic is the product of the blood, the sweat, and the tears of its frantic crew of editors.

First and foremost among these was Jean Remington, Mic editor-in-chief, who set to work energetically in June, 1951, and never let up until each copy of Mic was safely delivered to each and every subscriber.

At her side at all times was Nancy McIntyre, assistant editor. Together they performed both the big and little tasks on Mic, from planning the layout, reading copy, and seeing that the seniors had their pictures taken on time, to selling cokes at the Mic food sale.

Shirley Bender, photography editor, chased here and there with the Mic photographer at her heels, taking candids and not-so-candids.

Mike supervises staff activities.

World Within a World

Irma Miller Finn, literary editor, and Joan Kaitz Levine, assistant, delivered assignments to their enthusiastic staff, all of whom wrote, rewrote, and rewrote again to beat the ever-approaching deadline.

Teehnieal editor, Ronnie Nowiek, made sure that copy, spae, and type all got put together in the right proportions, even though there were only six picas to an inch.

Circulation manager, Sandy Laben, kept those sales going every week on the "Pay as You Go" plan.

Jackie Low, advertising manager, kept the money pouring in from the all-important sale of ads, while Bev Vanderpool, Mic business manager, kept the books balanced with an auditor's care.

In the midst of all this confusion, Mr. Valz was ever on hand with a calm comment or suggestion that would magically set everything to rights.

So here's the 1952 Mic, bringing you a glimpse through the looking glass of four wonderful years at Simmons.

Puppet Studio Gives Program of Fables Fifth Hour Friday

The Folktale Puppet Studio of Norwich, Vt., will be the guest artists at the third program of the Simmons Program Series tomorrow in the Auditorium at 12:05 p.m. Aesop's Fables and the Nutcracker will be included in the program.

Aesop's Fables includes The Crow and the Fox, The Frog and the Ox, The Wolf and the Lamb. These fables are arranged and related as a single humorous story without violating their essential integrity.

The Nutcracker, the second part of the same program, is a puppet interpretation of the familiar Tchaikovsky Nutcracker Suite.

Basil Milosoroff, the artist-producer of The Folktale Puppet Studio, is one of the leading puppet stylists in the country. He and Mrs. Milosoroff made Puppet Theatre their profession after receiving their degrees from Oberlin College eighteen years ago.

Editor Ann Marie DeVoe calmly weathers the Tuesday afternoon deadline.

To the Student Body:

Ever hear of the Library Committee? Sure you have. It is a committee that stems from Honor Board and includes representatives elected from English 10, 11, Contemporary Society and several faculty members. A really big problem that has been facing the whole student body for several years

The impracticability of keeping a collection of books without funds to buy new ones is a problem that has been facing the library committee for several years. The committee has been working on this problem for some time and has now found a solution. They have decided to raise the library fee from $1.00 to $1.50 per semester. This will allow them to buy new books and keep the collection up to date. They hope this will be a solution to the problem.

As Others See Us

At times others see us better than we see ourselves. The publication of Eisenhower's political career prompted the following editorial proof that the reputation of the Continent is under attack.

The independent London should be the policy of this with the United States and with any particular man. Did receive so many benefits from Democratic administration until Churchill to throw hats into glimpse of a possible rival. General Eisenhower will always be Commander in the war against the North Atlantic as a great friend, whom the served. For the rest, British American people in the conflict show the same friendship for toward the whole of the World. President Truman have shown.

The British comment, there seems to be an implication that country may be, he must be a of friendly cooperation.

Color, Exotic Charm Make Hindu Ballet Memorable Occasion

by Rita Sue King

Color, rhythm, sensitive interpretation and exotic charm complimenting one another made the Uday Shankar Hindu ballet Friday night an unusually memorable performance. Some people seem to feel that Hindu dancing is a cold emotionless expression of a mysterious way of life, but Friday's performance proved the falsity of such preconceived concepts.

The dances express all the feelings, desires, and fears of the common people. Interest in crops was seen in the dance Village Festival which depicted a post-harvest celebration. The mental reactions of a peasant girl conscious of the gaze of a stranger were beautifully interpreted in Nirikshan.

I really doubt that exams do anything to add years to your life; it seems to me they must subtract them at an alarming rate. What good can come from a schedule which includes twenty-one hours of absorbing a printed page and several more devoted to sleep? The situation is obviously unbalanced.

The Review is out!

Publication's Own Laboratories

Seniors in the School of Publication get the chance to write and rewrite to an editor's delight while working on the Review. The Review started in 1947 as a publishing lab for seniors in combination with the alumnae magazine. In brief, each girl is responsible for two articles a semester which she must write, edit, proofread, publicize, and Heaven only knows what else.

Moved into new quarters this year, the Review staff had the chance of producing the magazine in grand style—complete with coffee served "on the house" every Wednesday morning. In its brightly decorated home on the third floor, the Review surveyed everything imaginable, from freshmen to alumnae to the latest doings in Toonerville—just as long as it was new and original.

Dorothy Williams, editor and chief consultant, neatly showed her gals how to put spice into the dulllest article. And with a working knowledge of proofreading, copyfitting, layout, and the graphic arts, she showed the seniors that producing a magazine can be fun.

The practical experience gained by working on the Review has helped past graduates get jobs with Time, Life, Houghton Mifflin Company, Doubleday Doran, S. S. Pierce, the Boston Herald, and the Associated Press. Indeed, the frenzied calls in the Review office for rubber cement, scissors, paper, and page proofs are only a preview of the work the graduates will be doing.

Listed in the catalogue as "a course in the techniques of printing and in the appreciation of printing as a fine art," the Printshop (Publication 44) combined lectures with actual work on the press in Dotty and Ginnie—our guiding angel and printer's devil.

The Printshop, offered for the first time this year, is here to stay. It gives the Publication major the kind of information that is invaluable to people in the publishing field, just as the Review is an important and functional part of their program.

I. Beizer, J. Bloom, I. Johnson, H. Bloom.

The National Students Association is an organization of college student governments throughout the country working together to better the conditions of student life everywhere. Each student at Simmons College is automatically a member of NSA. Representatives from Simmons are sent to the national, regional, and area conferences where they exchange ideas with students from many different colleges. NSA is the only organization through which the needs, ideas, and opinions of the college students can be effectively represented on a national level.

This year the students worked with the Students' Mutual Assistance Program by contributing to Harvard's special library for student affairs and by helping other schools initiate student governments and honor systems.

NSA is very active at Simmons. It has a foreign student orientation program which begins in September and continues throughout the year. Projects like the selling of Christmas cards, Simmons shirts, and the foreign food fair during Spring Spree make economic aid for college students through NSA possible.

Academy

Of all the jumble of notes that await the Simmons student on the noteboard, perhaps none is more eagerly looked for, read with pleasure, and displayed with pride than the note informing her that she is in Academy.

Academy is the official honor society of Simmons, and its members are privileged to wear a blue and gold ribbon on their graduation gowns as a symbol of their academic achievement in college.

The requirements for membership in Academy are the completion of at least 32 year hours, an average of 3.2, and 50 quality points in the last semester preceding election to Academy, at the beginning of the junior or senior years, or at the end of the senior year.

This year the Academy Banquet and Reception for new members was held in the Refectory and Evans Hall, where Dr. Royal M. Frye addressed the members and faculty guests on "The Limitations of Science."

Academy members are treated with respect by both the students and faculty, for they have attained a degree of scholarship that many students aspire to, but that only a few are able to reach.

M. Mindess, J. Levine, J. Wood.

Glee Club

The Glee Club at Simmons College is made up of those girls who like to sing and who are not afraid of the many hours of rehearsing that are necessary for the Glee Club's high standards of performance. Under the direction of Mr. Cleaves, Glee Club advisor, weekly meetings are held on Mondays and serve as rehearsals for the many programs in which the Glee Club participates.

Several coffee cantatas were held this year, as well as an informal concert with M. I. T. in November. The Glee Club vocalized in Medford in December and at the Simmons Christmas Concert. This year, for the first time, the Glee Club sponsored a song contest for the purpose of furthering an interest in music and acquiring more modern college songs. Step Singing was conducted indoors during the winter, at which time the new songs were sung.

Membership in the Glee Club is determined by tryouts. Those accepted are especially active during the Baccalaureate and Commencement exercises. To end the season, an all-club banquet is held each year in a Boston hotel.

S. Bender, A. Robbins, N. Ehrlich, B. Jasak.

In 1949 Forum was reorganized and is now successfully making its way to the top. Forum is divided into four sub-committees each of which offers either social, political, intellectual, or cultural advantages and opportunities to the Simmons student.

The United Nations Committee, affiliated with the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, links the students with political and world-wide happenings and makes them aware of the U. N. as an ideal and a reality.

The Committee on Social Relations sponsors teas, discussion groups, and movies. The Committee hopes to give the individual student insight into current social problems and show her how she may help her community. Quite often girls find just the kind of helpful work they would like to do through the Volunteer Service Bureau.

Besides keeping the Forum bulletin board up to date, the Committee on Legislation brings political speakers to Simmons, speakers who keep the students informed on federal, state, and local legislation.

To aid student-faculty relations, the Committee on Discussion invites members of the faculty to take part in informal get-togethers with the students.

Sock and Buskin

M. Hinckley, N. Arms.

Sock and Buskin Society, the Simmons club whose interest lies in dramatics, received its very unusual name as the result of an all-college contest.

This year Sock and Buskin operated under a unique system. New members automatically became apprentices and were allowed to attend open meetings. However, only those members who had proven their loyalty to the Society by doing a certain amount of work could attend the business meetings, vote, and wear the Society pin. Quite often a group of Society members went to see the various plays that came to Boston.

Because the Society carries on so many activities such as backstage work, publicity, ticket selling, and planning social activities, it is not necessarily important that each and every member has dramatic ability. However, those members who show promising dramatic talent are given, through Sock and Buskin, an opportunity to work in summer stock.

Together with Stu-G, Sock and Buskin sponsored the Inter-Class Competitives, which started our big Christmas weekend with skits by the freshmen, sophomore and junior classes—each intent on taking top honors.

Modern Dance Club

For the girls who like to don a leotard and dance, there are weekly meetings of the Simmons Modern Dance Club. If a girl is particularly interested in dancing, she may participate in the optional Saturday morning practice sessions and perform in various college events, such as Spring Spree. Students also have the opportunity to take part in master dance classes.

Girls are admitted to the Modern Dance Club on the basis of the talent and enthusiasm they display during tryouts. It is possible for freshmen to elect the Modern Dance Workshop as a part of their physical education.

This year the Modern Dance Club, together with the Glee Club and Sock and Buskin, participated in a successful United Nations program in October. Besides combining with other Simmons clubs for special events, modern dancers joined forces with many nearby colleges to further their dancing pleasure.

This popular club is advised by Mrs. Anne Green, who does choreography, is a semi-professional dancer, and a member of the Boston Dance League.

D. Hanna, M. Freitas, P. Gates, M. Bartlett.

French Club

After a lapse of two years, the enthusiasm of last year's French class made possible the reorganization of Le Cercle Francais. This year Le Cercle Francais proved itself a thriving organization in the Simmons family of clubs. Although the members do not necessarily have to speak French, each and every member has a decided interest in the French language and French culture.

The Club now boasts a membership of forty energetic mademoiselles who attend meetings hoping to discover more and more about the French people, their historic background, music, art, and literature.

Because of the enthusiasm of the Social Chairmen and the members, the Club was able to sponsor a successful Valentine Card Social in February, a food fair, and an outdoor roast. Le Cercle Francais also showed movies of interest to its members on various occasions.

Although it can be considered a new club at Simmons this year, Le Cercle Francais has shown that intellectually curious Simmons girls can make a success of a club which disintegrated because of lack of interest.

Mr. Newman, M. LaGace, S. Hobart, J. Wright, B. Burrill, Mr. Fabrizi.

Anne Strong

N. Moore, M. DeRoma, M. Kellog, A. Lovell.

Through the Anne Strong Club, the nursing students keep in social contact with each other and in professional contact with the nursing field and its developments. This year monthly meetings featured speakers and movies which gave the students an opportunity to learn, among other things, about world health and new medical techniques. On the lighter side, members discussed past experiences and compared notes at the informal cook-out last fall in the backyard when the sophomores were introduced to their fellow nursing students.

Both those girls at the college and those in the hospital participated in the programs of the Club and joined in the Christmas party sponsored by the Anne Strong Club. The annual skit at the end of the year depicting the trials and tribulations of a student nurse was a riotous success. After joining the Massachusetts State Council of Student Nurses, the members of the Anne Strong Club sent delegates to the National League of Nursing Education conference in Atlantic City in May.

Anne Strong has given the students a taste of the professional organizations they may join when graduated.

Because 020 is the Dewey classification number for books on library science, 020 is certainly an appropriate name for the club at Simmons whose members are the students in the School of Library Science. After a slow disintegration last year, the students chose to revive the Club this year. If numbers and enthusiasm are any indication of the potential success of a group, then 020 will certainly stand the test of time.

At the first meeting of the newly-revived 020 Club, Mr. Shaffer, Director of the School of Library Science, welcomed the undergraduates and explained the purpose of the club to them. Miss Leonard was club advisor.

Through 020, undergraduates have a chance to meet the faculty and their fellow students on an informal level while learning more and more about the opportunities in the field of library science. This learning was accomplished at club meetings through the help of well-known librarians in the field who spoke on such topics as the duties of a children's librarian and the services which the librarian must provide for readers.

This year 020 sponsored a Christmas party for members of the School of Library Science.

The Prince Club is made up of all the juniors, seniors, and graduate students in the Prince School. Its object is to bring the girls together to discuss opportunities, field work, developments in the merchandising field, and topics of general interest to the Prince student.

Some of the activities held by the Prince Club this year were a dance at Prince with Harvard Law School in November, and a farewell coffee hour for the seniors and grad students before they left for their field assignments. A welcome-home breakfast the morning these students returned provided a means of further acquainting the girls with one another. It also gave the seniors and grads a chance to get a glimpse of what was in store for them at a tea in December.

The Prince Club had a coffee hour every Wednesday, at which time members had a chance to meet with the faculty and other members of the school for informal chats. These coffee hours serve to unite students and faculty in a common bond of interest in the retailing field. Mr. David Blakeslee is the Club's advisor.

Home Economics Club

Ellen Richards

J. Patterson, B. Lothrop, L. Hill, B. Cofman, J. Loring.

The Home Ec Club has the sure fire recipe for successful meetings—an interesting speaker plus plenty of good homemade refreshments. The first meeting of the year put a spotlight on careers in the home economics field, and was marked by the presentation of the Borden Award to the outstanding senior. The other meetings held combined speakers on various phases of home economics plus lighter, entertaining programs. These later programs included a visitor from the Traveler's Aid Bureau who gave a talk on traveling. In April a guest from the National Cranberry Association demonstrated to the girls a variety of ways to prepare cranberries for decoration and eating.

Two outstanding events which the girls sponsored were their annual Christmas party, complete with the famous homemade gingerbread house which served as centerpiece for the gayly decorated table, and the annual banquet in May at which time freshmen interested in the School of Home Economics were guests.

The Home Ec girls successfully completed their special project of making cookies, nighties, and other things for the New England Home for Little Wanderers.

Ellen Richards is one of the oldest clubs at Simmons, tracing its history to the days when Simmons classes were held in the buildings of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. With the zeal that characterized Ellen Richards, first woman admitted to M. I. T., the biology, chemistry, and physics majors reconcile any individual preferences under one directing force—a love of science.

A successful year was marked by the acquaintance dance in November with the science majors of neighboring men's colleges and the annual Christmas party with the faculty. The ever-popular New Hampshire ski weekend at the end of finals provided brisk exercise, bridge, and singing for the club members.

At regular meetings people prominent in the major fields of science spoke to the girls. Delegates to the Intercollegiate Chemical Society conference brought back reports of the activities of science majors in other colleges and new developments in the field. The Club sponsored field trips to the Forest Hills Laboratory and the Monsanto Chemical Plant. The annual barbecue in May was a roaring climax to the club's activities.

Riding Club

The excuse, "I think horses are just beautiful, but frankly I'm frightened to death of them, they're so big!" just doesn't hold water with that small but courageous group, the Riding Club. Almost daily, the members journeyed to Wright's Stables where, with unanimous and contagious enthusiasm, they rode to their hearts' content. The girls, who took beginning or advanced lessons, also rode in the ring and on the trails in Franklin Park.

Several riding meets were held. One of them was an intercollegiate meet to which other colleges sent their best riders, all sharing in interest and ability.

At the monthly meetings which featured lectures, films, and teas, the girl who knows nothing about horses has the chance to learn that they are nothing to fear at all.

Of course, as with anything worthwhile, riding is a bit discouraging at first what with "fannyitis" and all. But riding, according to Club members, is the most satisfying sport in the world.

Outing Club

The Outing Club, the second largest club at Simmons, is composed of outdoor enthusiasts who take pleasure in outdoor activities. Many day-trips were held around Boston at which time the girls went rock climbing, sailing, hiking, biking, skiing, and square dancing, with men's and women's colleges in the Boston area.

The club members also held monthly indoor meetings dedicated to the discussion of a particular sport. This year the Outing Club sponsored an all-college assembly at which the Director of the Frontenac School showed colored movies of skiing in the Laurentians and Canadian Rockies.

The Simmons Outing Club belongs to the Inter-collegiate Outing Club Association. The girls of this Association spent a week camping and hiking in the Adirondacks of New York and went on the annual Lake George Canoe Trip in October. The last inter-club meeting was a kabob barbecue held in Westwood at the estate of Colonel Philip Sherwood, National Director of the American Youth Hostel.

YWCA Club

*C. Zinn, A. Southworth, N. Cerie,
P. MacDonald.*

The YWCA Club at Simmons is the campus unit of the Boston YWCA, and its membership is open to students of any faith. The aim of the Club is "to build a fellowship which cuts across all barriers of race, creed, or economic status."

In October an open house was held at the Boston "Y" which featured a tour, bowling, swimming, and supper, as well as a meeting with the "Y" staff. There was also a members' meeting with a foreign guest speaker.

In November the big events were a fireside chat on "Origins of Religion" and a chocolate party at the "Y" for the settlement house children. The Christmas project for underprivileged children, for which the members made dolls and toys, and the traditional carol fest provided the girls with a warm glow which comes only from doing good for others.

Discussions, sports, dances, and parties were on the agenda for the YWCA Club, and through this organization the girls found themselves gaining in knowledge as well as having a lot of worth-while fun.

Athletic Association

The Athletic Association was created in the hope of offering a sports program on an interclass basis. It was started in the spring of 1950 and operated that year in a limited way, conducting interclass tournaments in basketball, tennis, swimming, and softball.

This past year saw the first real operating season of the Athletic Association. A governing board, with a representative from each class, worked with the president, who was elected in the spring all-college elections.

M. Downey, E. Heiman, B. Pool, L. Wolcott, J. Hartley, C. McCann.

With each season's athletic activity, a leader conducted the general management of the sports. It has been through the A. A. that Simmons has been able to participate in the inter-college playdays held by neighboring Boston colleges. This year class tennis tournaments, a peppy basketball season that closed with a student-faculty game, softball, and for those active indoor gals, a ping-pong tournament, made up a busy, full-of-fun program. The Athletic Association made awards to students on the basis of participation rather than skill in sports.

Orthodox Club

The Simmons Orthodox Club is generally considered one of the most active clubs of its kind among the greater Boston colleges. It has been called upon to lend aid to many schools which either have small clubs and want to enlarge them, or none at all and want to start one.

The Orthodox Club, with its spiritual advisor, Rev. James Coucouzes of the Greek Orthodox Church in Boston, has two goals. One is the uniting of girls of the Orthodox faith, but of various nationalities; and the other is the fostering of better relations between all faiths.

Many open meetings were held on campus, with prominent speakers and guests of different religions. Other events this year have been a dance with the Orthodox Clubs of Tufts, Jackson, M. I. T., and Suffolk, and several outings with the M. I. T. Orthodox Club.

One of the traditions of the Orthodox Club is an annual Mother's Day party, which was a great success this year.

H. Pappis, R. Yannoulos.

Christian Science

The aim of the Christian Science Club is to foster a feeling of friendship, love, and cooperation among the Christian Scientists of the College, and to offer those interested a chance to learn about Christian Science.

Every Wednesday afternoon a meeting, open to all students and all colleges, was held in the Lounge, where religious talks on Christian Science were given.

Evening receptions, also open to all, were held to aid students in their studies and college life. The lecturers were appointed by the Board of Directors of the Mother Church, The First Christian Science Church. This year Richard Knox Lee, Miss Florence Middaugh, and representatives from the Christian Science Publishing House spoke on Christian Science as related to student life.

The Christian Science Forum, or Falmouth Hall, was the center of most social activities. The traditional fall and spring formals were held at the Forum; and the New Year's formal was held at the Totem Pole.

IVCF

In 1924 the League of Evangelical Students at Simmons decided that it was to their advantage for mutual strength and security to combine their local group with the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship. The purpose of the Club is to strengthen the Christian spiritually, intellectually, and socially. Its purpose is not only to broaden the members in religious ideals, but to stimulate an interest in all people.

The activities of this Club are varied. The meetings consist of Bible studies, speakers, and movies. In April, Simmons had its fourth annual banquet for the New England Area. The fortunate girls chosen at that time were sent to Camp Pinnacle and to Campus-in-the-Woods, which are leadership training camps. In June, the IVCF had a large conference with the students from the New England and North New York areas in Albany, New York. Staff members, who are college graduates, instructed the group in preparing the year's program of such activities as beach parties and bowling parties, in addition to the more serious Club activities.

Newman Club

M. Powers, M. Harrigan, E. Quinn, B. Boyce.

The Simmons Newman Club had its first meeting on January 13, 1915, as a member of the St. Cecilia's College Club. Inaugurated by Constance Gibbin, the Newman Club established its own organization in 1919.

Named for Cardinal Newman, the Club is a national organization of Catholic students in non-sectarian colleges. Father Robert Scott served as chaplain for the Club this year and gave many lectures and held discussions in addition to his advisory duties.

The Newman Club has many social functions. The big annual event is the Mother-Daughter Communion Breakfast in May.

The Simmons Newman Club is also a member of the New England Province and the National Newman Club Federation. The activities of the New England Province this year were ski weekends, dances, and pre-holiday parties with M. I. T., Holy Cross and B. U. S. P. R.

The Newman Club is a large and very active club at Simmons. Its members find that they are enriched both culturally and socially as a result of membership.

Hillel

R. Zigman, M. Block, B. Perlmutter, S. Slassberg, E. Leibowitz, Rabbi Helman, E. Kantor.

Hillel at Simmons originated in 1943 when Dr. Judah J. Shapero, Associate National Director of Hillel Foundations, organized the Simmons chapter. This year, Hillel's membership reached an all-time high. The Club's flexible program is designed to instruct the Jewish student in her ancient and modern heritage.

Hillel collaborated with the Hillel Clubs of M. I. T., Harvard, Tufts, Radcliffe, and Leslie for the purpose of furthering their social and religious affiliations. All the executive officers of Hillel attended joint meetings twice a month, at which time the interests of the individual organizations were promoted and joint functions planned.

This year Hillel carried out its spiritual, cultural, and social aims with the help of such cooperative speakers as Will Herberg, noted author, and Dr. Frye, a member of the Simmons faculty.

Besides its monthly meetings, Hillel held traditional services at Hillel House, Sunday night forums, religious classes, and also dances.

With its varied interests, Hillel has tried and succeeded in giving the Jewish student a full, vibrant program.

Christian Association

Added to the Simmons roster of clubs this year was the Christian Association—a group representing all Protestant faiths. With sixteen active members, its goal of "worship, study, and action" was successfully carried through. Religious services, Bible studies, service projects, caroling at Christmas in the Old People's Home in Roxbury, decorating the Children's Hospital, and meeting with other religious clubs of Boston-area colleges kept the new club on a steady go all year.

"How to apply Christianity to everyday life" served as the major subject for guest speakers at monthly meetings. The second meeting held during the month usually took the form of a discussion hour or a time to work on one of the Club's many projects.

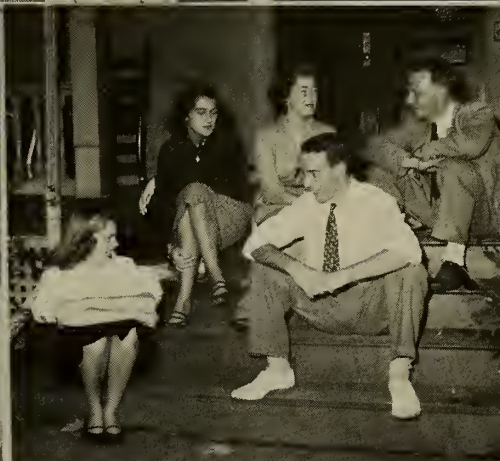

The Christian Association tried very hard to carry out its purpose of uniting all religions through understanding. A faculty advisor and three ministers—always ready to offer help and advice—acted as counselors for the Association. With their constitution, officers, and budget set up, the Christian Association has been enthusiastically and warmly launched.

When juniors catch the Christmas spirit, there's gaiety in the Lounge.

Junior class meeting—big decisions that determine the future activities of a class.

Senior Class Activities

September . . . resplendent in our caps and gowns . . . we looked forward . . . with some sorrow . . . with some joy . . . with much enthusiasm . . . to our last year at Simmons. The Hobo Party in Evans . . . paint . . . lipstick . . . Daisy Mae costumes. Senior Prom . . . orchids . . . that special perfume . . . tulle, satin, lace over a hoop . . . "Night and Day" in the background. Senior-Faculty Supper . . . rubbing elbows with our favorite profs . . . the Lunchroom was never like this . . . Class Day . . . we are nearly at the end of the road . . . reminiscences . . . four years at Simmons . . . study . . . meetings . . . dances . . . traditions . . . and now alumnae.
